The Factory House (demolished)

North Laurel

Private

The Factory House was a three bay wide, two bay deep, two story high, brick building, resting on a full story high, stone basement built on the side of a hill, featuring stone lintels over windows and doors.

A photograph taken in the early 1970's indicates proportionally scaled and vertically aligned fenestration, with a dominant central bay, holding first and second floor rectangular entrances surmounted by transoms and flanked by vertical side lights and a third floor double window.
